Illustration

(This does not form part of this paragraph and does not extend or limit its meaning)

A and B each own 50% of the issued shares of a landowning company. B wishes to sell, and A wishes to buy, B's 50% interest in the company for one million dollars, so that A can thereby become the 100% owner of the company. Rather than agreeing to a direct sale of the shares which would, of course, attract stamp duty, A and B agree that the company will purchase B's shares for $1 million dollars out of monies to be donated to the company by A or otherwise. It is further agreed that once the shares are acquired by the company, they will be cancelled, thereby leaving A the sole (and thus 100%) owner of the company. The final commercial result, viz a viz beneficial ownership of the company, is therefore the same as if B had sold his shares directly to A. Such a transaction as described in the above illustration will be chargeable for stamp duty as fully as if B had sold his shares directly to A.

- (f) the addition of any person to the beneficial class of a trust and the contemporaneous or subsequent removal or exclusion of the other beneficiaries of the trust such that the only person who remains beneficially interested under the trust is the person so added;
- (g) any other transaction under or in relation to any trust or company resulting in any person indirectly acquiring or succeeding to the beneficial ownership of any land or business or any part thereof unless such transactions are exempted from stamp duty under any other provision of this Act.

*Dividends-in-specie.
