 - (iii) which rebuts evidence of the complainant's sexual behaviour or absence thereof that was previously adduced by the prosecution; or

(b) unless the Judge is satisfied that the exclusion of the evidence or question in respect of which leave is sought, would be unfair to the accused because of the extent to which that evidence—

(2) Nothing in subsection (1) prohibits the publication or broadcasting or inclusion in a cable programme of matter consisting only of a report of criminal proceedings other than proceedings at, or intended to lead to, or on an appeal arising out of, a trial at which the accused is charged with the offence.

(3) The trial Judge may—

- (a) on an application by the accused, direct that the prohibition against identifying the complainant be inapplicable, if he is satisfied that—
 - (i) such a direction is required for the purpose of inducing persons likely to be needed as witnesses to come forward to give evidence at the trial; and
 - (ii) the defence of the accused is likely to be substantially prejudiced if such direction is not given;
- (b) direct that the prohibition against identifying the complainant be inapplicable to any matter specified in the direction, if he is satisfied that—
 - (i) such a prohibition would impose a substantial and unreasonable restriction on the reporting of the trial proceedings; and
 - (ii) the removal or relaxation of the restriction would be in the public interest.

(4) Where a person has been convicted of rape or any other sexual offence under this Act and has given written notice of appeal or has made an application for leave to appeal against the conviction, the Court of Appeal may, upon the application by the convicted person, direct that the prohibition against the identification of the complainant be inapplicable, if the Court is satisfied that—
